Drama Dept. presents 'A Tomb with a View'

by ROB HOOK
Staff Writer

Preparations and rehearsals for the Boone Campus drama department's presentation of "A Tomb with a View" are nearing completion!

The comedy-thriller will be performed Friday and Saturday, March 3-4, at 8 p.m. in the Boone Campus auditorium.

Tickets are $2 for Boone Campus students and $3 for the public. They may be purchased this week outside The Campus Center, or at the door.

The play consists of a cast of 10 strange characters, all gathered in the library of Monument House to hear a will reading.

The strangeness begins in Act I, as Hamilton Penworthy, the family solicitor (portrayed by Tom Hope) is seen helping himself to a drink and talking to a man who thinks he's a werewolf chained to a cell in the basement.

Lucien Tomb (Ted Hawkins) is the eldest survivor of the family, and is found ranting and raving through the first act until he loses his head (literally) in the last scene of the second act.

Emily Tomb (Sherri Klemmer) also adds to the odd humor of the play by appearing as a rough and intimidating woman in men's clothes, and delivers a lot of sarcasm up until the time of her death in the final act.

Dora Tomb (Tracey Herrick) is a police-paranoid family member who is noted for her poisonous wines, which killed the electricians and the local Avon lady, and whom she promptly buried in her flower garden.

Agatha Hammond (Bernice Kitt) makes her appearance as the family housekeeper of 40 years. She is convinced the deceased head of the household is still alive and walking the halls at night.

Peregrine Potter (Rob Hook) is one of the last survivors, and one of the more "normal" characters. Despite Perry's innocent appearance, he has an embarrassing secret of his own, and finds himself trapped with a bunch of lunatics he wishes he hadn't met.

Monica Tomb (Jodi Mentzer) is the family nymphomaniac who just can't get enough of Perry. In between sarcastic slams with her sister, she tries every seductive move to win Perry over until she finally succeeds.

Freda Mountjoy (Kaylyne Hoppe) has a short encounter with the Tomb family, as her own plot backfires, and she winds up dead at the end of the first act.

Marcus Tomb (Tarak Abbasi) is yet another deranged family member who's convinced he is Caesar. Marcus meets his end midway through the play when his nightmare comes true.

And finally, there's Anne Franklin (Mary Rhodd), the family nurse. A rather attractive, middle-aged woman who is very concerned for the family, especially Marcus, is also one of the last survivors. Anne has many, many secrets, several of which lead to the rather shocking conclusion of the performance.

But who is it committing the murders? Could it be an unsuspecting family member, or maybe a servant? Perhaps an outsider? The secret is not revealed until the climactic end, and the only way to find out who and why is to attend the performance March 3-4.

Kay Mueller, director of the play, feels confident about the performance.

"So far, I'm impressed with how well everyone has done with their lines, considering the amount of time they've had to work on them," she said.

Among some of the more difficult things yet to be finished are the mastering of a revolving door and the make-up of the characters.

Formal dance planned

by ROB HOOK
Staff Writer

Plans are under way for a formal dance to be held Friday, March 31, at 8 p.m. at the Elks Club in Boone.

The suggested theme for this dance is "Gone with the Wind," an idea proposed by several DMACC students.

It is apparently felt Boone Campus should sponsor such a dance in which students are allowed to wear evening dresses and tuxedos.

A live band will be hired for the entertainment. This event is being sponsored by PBL and NSU, who are asking help from other Boone Campus clubs.

Watch for further details in the next issues of The Bear Facts.

GARS now available

by ROB HOOK
Staff Writer

A Graduation Analysis Report System (GARS) is now available for all full-time Boone Campus students interested in computerized academic advisement and graduation information, according to George Silberhorn, counselor.

The report includes many things, beginning with the curricula for each catalog year since 1985-86, program requirements met and unmet, all classes completed, credit accepted for transfer students, number of semester hours completed for a particular program, program GPA and cumulative GPA, and finally, course substitutions.

This system also allows students to "shop" for a program and shows immediately the consequences of a program change. GARS has been very beneficial in providing students and academic advisors with an immediate assessment of student progress towards graduation, Silberhorn commented.

These reports are automatically mailed to all full-time students at the end of each term, and some are still being mailed.

If a student does not receive a report and would like to obtain one, a report request form can be filled out in the office.

Intramural news

by ROB HOOK
Staff Writer

Intramural basketball and Spring Fling '89 are among the events being planned this spring by Sabra Borich, intramurals coordinator.

"We hope to have a good student turnout for both of these events," she commented.

Basketball

Those persons interested in forming an intramural basketball team are encouraged to do so by signing up on the poster by the lounge. Play will begin March 5.

Students with ideas for tournaments are welcome to discuss them with Borich.

Spring Fling

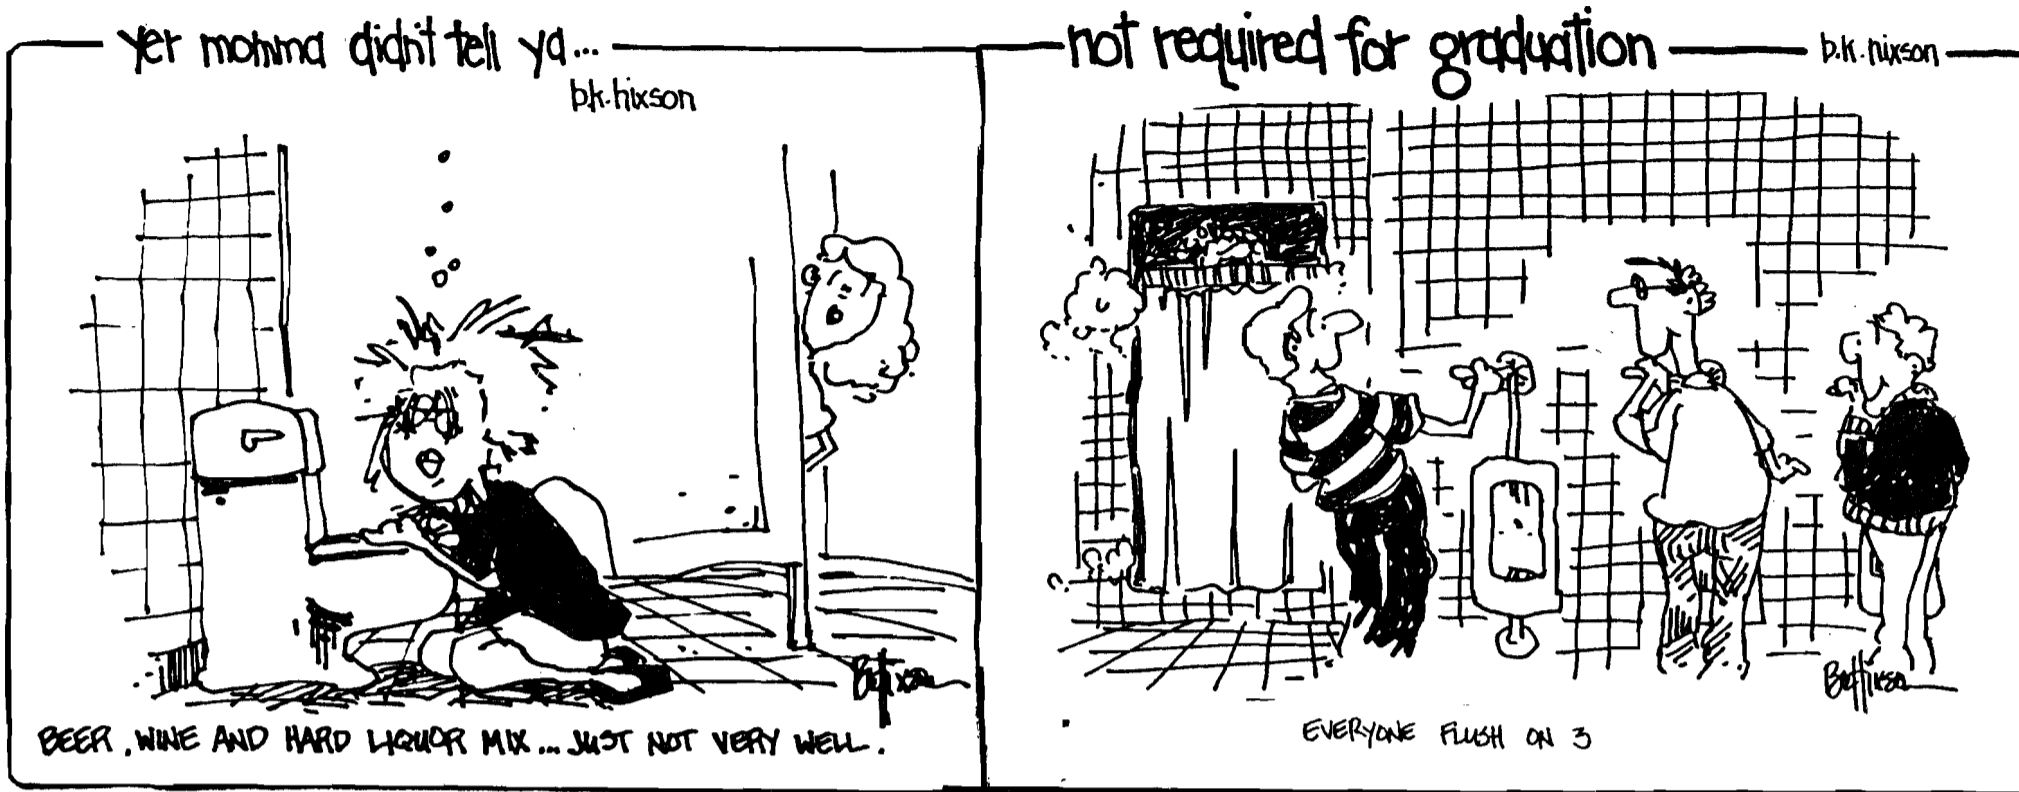

Spring Fling '89 will kick off a full day of events Thursday, April 20, and will include sand pit volleyball and free throw shooting.

Other events scheduled are tug-of-war, one-pitch softball, Frisbee golf, coed tennis and miniature golf.

This year's theme will be determined from contest entries. Entries may be turned in immediately by placing them in either George Silberhorn's or Borich's mailboxes in the office.

Entries should be submitted on an 8½x11" sheet of paper and should be spring/recreation related. Deadline for all entries is March 31.

All about good and bad instructors

by ROB HOOK
Editorial Page Writer

All of us at one point in time have had an instructor that we thoroughly enjoyed — perhaps in high school or in college. And with these good instructors, we have encountered some bad ones, too.

What differentiates a good instructor from a bad instructor? The answer will surely vary from person to person, for this topic is clearly a matter of opinion.

However, I feel there are some common characteristics of both good and bad instructors.

Let's begin with the good. A good instructor begins with a clear, concise outline which usually appears in the form of a syllabus, which helps students with their planning as well.

Thoroughness plays an important role also. By taking the time to explain the most minor details to make sure everyone is on the same level, everyone benefits. Repetition never hurts anyone.

Just as important is a personable appearance and attitude. If a teacher presents him or herself as friendly and concerned, we then feel more comfortable to approach that instructor about a problem we may have. This is a point I want to emphasize, for it's here many people begin to have a problem. If a teachers appear as intimidating, we tend to not communicate with them. This is definitely a two-way street; we, as students, should approach an instructor regardless of personal impressions, and instructors should be equally cooperative when dealing with students having special difficulties.

On the other hand, some common characteristics of instructors whom we are less impressed with usually begin with class participation. Many people are quite shy and listen intently despite the fact that they say less. These are also the same people the instructors call upon the most. It seems the issue should be how much the students learn from the course, not how many times they raise their hands. It also seems the more emphasis an instructor places on class participation, the more people raise their hands and comment just for the sake of commenting.

Another big issue is bias on the part of the instructor. Sexist, as well as racist, comments have no place in the classroom. Everyone has opinions and views, but unless the class calls for such expression, they are best left unvoiced in the classroom.

A simple, yet equally important problem is lack of explanation from the instructor. Occasionally, a teacher will hand out worksheets with little or no explanation. Along these lines comes memorization. Memorizing a workbook or worksheet may prove to be beneficial at the moment, but that information is usually forgotten soon after the course is completed.

Given these circumstances, what should a student do when encountering a good instructor? Tell them! Instructors like to hear they are doing a good job just as much as students like to receive a good grade.

Considering the other circumstances, what should a student do when they have a conflict with an instructor? First, talk to them. Many teachers are not aware of the fact that there may be a problem. Again, communication plays a crucial role.

If a student has spoken with the instructor with little or no results, then there are several options open to them. First, the student can speak to the chairperson or leader of the particular department involved.

Another option is to speak with the counselors, Rich Finnestad and George Silberhorn, whose offices are located in the main office. The counselors are usually available throughout the day, and appointments can be made at the front office desk.

The last option is to speak with Dean Kriss Philips. You could expect the dean to ask you questions concerning the problem, and from your answers he, in turn, will perhaps give you a different perspective or point of view.

If the initial discussion with the dean does not satisfy the student, the dean will then talk with the instructor about the situation, and hopefully, will resolve the problem at that time.

Should all the above steps prove ineffective, then a formal complaint can be filed. Details for filing such a complaint can be obtained from the counselors or the dean. However, students are strongly encouraged to speak to the instructor first, for the main concern of the dean as well as the instructors is to ensure everyone is treated fairly and equally.

Update on the video

by ANGIE BRELSFORD
Co-Editor

Some curiosity has mounted over the filming of the Boone Campus video Nov. 3.

Tom Clarkson, vice president of DMACC institutional relations, Ankeny, is in charge of the video. He commented Boone Campus will see the video "fairly soon."

Commentator for the video was Connie McBirnie, a popular central Iowa weather anchor. The video depicted student life at Boone Campus.

Students and faculty were featured in many ways. Boone Campus clubs, basketball teams and the cheer squad were also shown.

Boone Campus will use the video as a means to help recruit new students to the campus. It will be shown at the area high schools as well.

It is possible portions of the video may be used to make commercial spots for Boone Campus, also.

Iowa Attorney General Thomas J. Miller was welcomed by staff and students of DMACC - Boone Campus while visiting Boone, Feb. 9.

Miller presented a speech in The Campus Center.

He announced he is planning to run for governor in 1990. If elected governor, "I would be a leader and have a long range plan for Iowa and stick with it," Miller said.

Miller believes and knows he can make a difference in the State of Iowa.

"By working together, we can make Iowa a better state and a better place to live," he said.

Branstad's ideas "are like playing a baseball game. He gets on base, but he never makes it to home plate. He hovers over an idea but never completes that idea," Miller said.

Another goal Miller wants to accomplish is creating thousands of jobs for the people of Iowa. He is also very concerned with education, environment and growth production for the state in the future.

"When part of the state suffers, we all suffer," he added.

Miller's main goal is to hit a grand slam for the Iowa people. "I will never forget all the support I have received while in office," he said.

NSU off to a busy semester

by ANGIE BRELSFORD
Co-Editor

NSU held its initial meetings of spring term Feb. 6-7.

Pat Triska, NSU president, said the first and second year nursing students could not find a time to meet together, so they are meeting separately.

"First year students are currently busy organizing a slate of officers that both groups will vote on," Triska said.

She added second year students are making arrangements for class pictures for graduation.

Both groups voted to buy a plaque honoring Nancy Handley. (Handley, a Boone Campus nursing instructor, was killed in an automobile accident fall semester.) The plaque will list scholarship recipients of the Nancy Handley Scholarship.

Triska said the plaque will be hung in the nursing offices area.

Nursing students may still apply for that scholarship. Inquire at the nursing office.

Several nursing students are helping with Boone County Daffodil Days, March 18-21. They will assist Connie Booth, nursing dept. chair, by taking orders for daffodils.

Orders must be made by Tuesday, Feb. 28. The cost is $4 for 10 flowers. Flowers will be ready for Palm Sunday, if requested. Proceeds from this American Cancer Society sponsored project will go to cancer education, prevention, and research.

An NSU meeting was held after press time to vote on new officers. Watch The Bear Facts next month for details.

Lady Bears' record now stands at 4-16

by MIKE ELBERT
Sports Writer

Bears vs. Iowa Lakes

The Lady Bears basketball team rolled to a decisive victory over Iowa Lakes, 62-54, Saturday, Jan. 28, at the Boone Campus auditorium.

Marilyn Cason led the scoring attack with 17 points, followed by Shari Mosman who contributed 15. In addition, Cori Allen came through with 12 points, eight of which were scored in the third quarter alone.

A total team effort was put forth by the Lady Bears to seal their third seasonal victory as all contributed in some way, either scoring, rebounding, or on defense.

Team Stats

Cason 17, Mosman 15, Allen 12, Hoversten 9, Clark 6, Bunger 6, and Roth 2.

Bears vs. Creston

The Lady Bears lost to an impressive Creston squad, 83-71, Monday, Jan. 30, at the Boone auditorium.

Mosman poured in 21 points to lead all scorers while Cason dumped in 20. Allen pumped in 16 points while Clark and Bunger contributed six and four, respectively.

Team Stats

Mosman 21, Cason 20, Allen 16, Clark 6, Bunger 4, Hoversten 2, and Roth 2.

Bears vs. William Penn

The Lady Bears won their fourth game of the season as they squeaked by William Penn, 75-74, Wednesday, Feb. 1, at the Boone auditorium.

Cason poured in 23 points, 10 of which came in the first quarter alone while Allen remained a consistent double-figures scorer by pumping in 20. Mosman added 19 while Hoversten and Bunger rounded out the scoring with 10 and three points, respectively.

Team Stats

Cason 23, Allen 20, Mosman 19, Hoversten 10, and Clark 3.

Bears vs. NIACC

The Lady Bears traveled to Mason City Saturday, Feb. 6, only to lose the contest, 86-74.

Cason looked great as she burned the net with 24 points, 12 of which came in the second quarter. Allen and Mosman scored 17 apiece while Hoversten, Bunger, Roth and Clark closed out the scoring with six, four, four and two points, respectively.

Team Stats

Cason 24, Allen 17, Mosman 17, Hoversten 6, Bunger 4, Roth 4, and Clark 2.

Bears vs. Reames

The Lady Bears lost to Reames, 80-74, in a close game Wednesday, Feb. 8, at the Boone Campus auditorium.

Although the Bears led at halftime, Reames outscored them in the final stretch by seven points.

Mosman led the Lady Bear scorers with 19 points followed closely by Allen and Cason who scored 18 and 17 points, respectively.

Hoversten and Clark reached double figures as they contributed 10 points apiece.

Team Stats

Mosman 19, Allen 18, Cason 17, Clark 10, and Hoversten 10.

Bears vs. Creston

The Lady Bears were dominated by a very strong Creston team, 84-58, Saturday, Feb. 11 at Creston.

Cason accounted for almost half of the Lady Bears' points as she scored 22. Mosman scored 13, followed by Allen who nailed 10.

Team Stats

Cason 22, Mosman 13, Allen 10, Hoversten 7, and Bunger 6.

Bears vs. William Penn

The Lady Bears dropped their sixteenth game of the season to William Penn, 84-68, Monday, Feb. 13, at William Penn's gym in Oskaloosa.

Cason came through with 24 points, illustrating her presence in the league as one of the best scorers Coach Criner has had in years. Mosman contributed 17 to the losing effort while Allen poured in 10 points.

Although the Bears' record doesn't show it, they are a team full of potential. "We are the best free throw shooting team in the state as of now, shooting 69%," commented Coach Dick Criner. The problem lies in the Lady Bears' defense.

"We allow 79.7 points per game which is one of the worst averages in the league, and we only score 65.7 points per game which is why we haven't won many," added Criner.

Season Team Stats (through William Penn game)

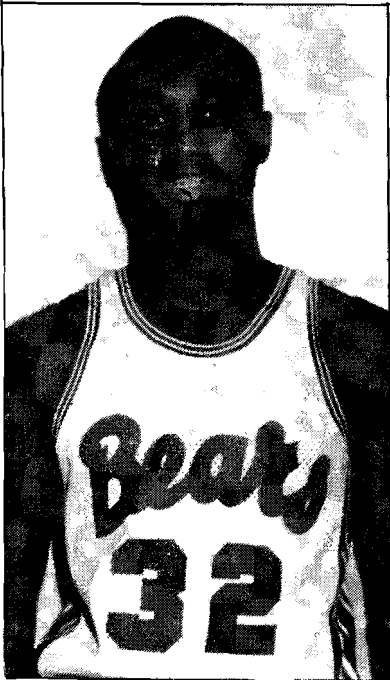

Cason 342, Allen 321, Mosman 274, Hoversten 127, Bunger 73, Clark 67, Roth 58, K. Cunningham 7, and Cunningham 2.

Indeed, in only 13 games, Hardy has scored 262 points which is a 20.1 points per game season average. In addition, he has 136 rebounds which leads the team along with an amazing statistic of 29 blocked shots.

BARRY HARDY

Hughes scored 20 points, six of which were via the three point stripe.

Johnson made a strong contribution of 17 points and four stolen balls while making his presence felt as an upcoming forward in the league.

CAMPUS LIFE

Audience raves about "Oedipus Rex"

Approximately 160 theatergoers attended The National Shakespeare Company's production of "Oedipus Rex" Thursday, Feb. 16, at 8 p.m. in the Boone Campus auditorium.

Overall, the general feeling of that audience was of enjoyment, amazement, and complete concentration on what was happening on stage.

"Oedipus Rex" is the story of a man who unknowingly murders his father and marries his mother. The timeless tragedy has survived as one of the most powerful Greek dramas. It was written by Sophocles in approximately 430 B.C.

Kay Mueller, speech and drama teacher, said the performance was first rate.

"The actors had the complete attention of the audience. It was an excellent production," she added.

Dean Kriss Philips commented, "It was a great evening of theater at Boone Campus. I was glad to see the good support shown by the faculty and the community."

Following the production, a reception was held in The Campus Center, organized by Jinny Silberhorn, speech teacher and Learning Center. Many of the guests had favorable comments about the production, while enjoying refreshments donated by faculty members.

Several faculty members had the opportunity to meet the 12 New York actors prior to the performance at a dinner held at Mueller's residence. The actors seemed to enjoy the home-cooked meal prepared by Mueller and other communications department faculty members.

Those involved with bringing The National Shakespeare Company to Boone Campus and contributing in various ways are: Mueller, George Silberhorn, Jill Burkhart, Sunny Powers, Philips, Paula Trowbridge, Jayne Smith and Jinny Silberhorn. Special thanks to the Boone Campus students helping out the evening of the performance.

The National Shakespeare Company was created in 1963 by Philip Meister, a New York producer and director, and Elaine Sulka. The company tours coast-to-coast during its September to May season.

Boone Campus pursuing the possibility of day care

by TRACEY HERRICK
Co-Editor

The results from a survey conducted last December have shown there would definitely be interest in starting an on-campus day-care center here at Boone Campus.

The 46 responses were turned in from both students and faculty. These responses indicated a strong interest in a day-care program.

Interest has been shown to place 42 children, ranging in age from newborn to six years, in the day-care center.

As a result of the interest shown, Dean Kriss Philips is currently pursuing grants for funding of the center.

"I feel that the need is here; that's certainly been shown. I feel a day-care center would be a real plus for our campus. The next hurdle is to locate some funds to enable us to get started. We are a long way from opening a center here, but we are certainly pursuing the matter."

Telenet unit available

by TRACEY HERRICK
Co-Editor

A telenet unit has been purchased for DMACC - Boone Campus, which will allow groups around the state to conduct teleconferences, according to Jayne Smith, librarian.

This unit will be of great importance to those who attend a large number of meetings to conduct business. This system allows one to 15 people on campus to talk with other groups around the state without wasting travel time.

The telenet system is already working and requests have been turned in from various staff members.

Engineers are currently looking into a slight problem with speaking in the new system, but it's hoped to be resolved in a test-run soon.

Smith commented, "I'm so glad we (Boone Campus) now have the opportunity to benefit from a system like this."

Interested parties need to contact Smith for a time to reserve the system.

Part timers required to take assessment exams

by ANGIE BRELSFORD
Co-Editor

According to the terms of the DMACC development studies plan, assessment in the basic skill areas of reading, math and writing is required of all full-time students.

However, a new addition has been made in the studies plan, according to Sunny Powers, chair of the Boone Campus communications department.

Part-time students, as well as full-time students, will now be required to demonstrate skills by taking the assessment test, beginning this fall. Students will be required to pass the test for writing skills before they can register for a writing course, for math skills before they can register for a math course, and in reading before they can register for their third college credit course. The assessment requirement may be waived on the basis of documented successful previous college experience.

Powers said, "An assessment test simply tells us if you're ready."

She goes on to stress that this plan is to make the students successful in passing the course.

"If the assessment test shows the student does not have the skills to enter a certain course, he or she will be encouraged to enroll in an adaptor class," explains Powers.

The student will be prevented from registering if the assessment shows the student is not prepared. The courses entered into this system will be called "protected" courses.

A protected class at Boone Campus is Composition I, which will start next fall.

This idea of testing came from DMACC teachers. They had direct contact with students and became aware that some were struggling.

The plan is designed to protect both the student and the quality of instruction.

The development studies committee was set up to help the problem.

"The committee looked at success rates of students who had enrolled in these courses. They found a high rate of drop-outs or low grades," said Powers.

The development studies committee has been collecting data since the 1970s. With this information, they have looked for solutions.

The peer tutoring program was one of these solutions. This program has been practiced for approximately six years. Tutoring has benefitted some, but with others there was no change. Dropouts and low grades are still a problem.

A few years ago, recent information from the committee was brought to attention and resulted in protecting classes.

A committee, similar to Boone's development studies plan, recently completed a two-year study of Colorado community colleges. It showed the effectiveness of basic skills assessment and advising for students at their schools.

Here are their findings:

- More than 80% of the new students who follow assessment related advice succeed academically and are more likely to persist at least one additional term than those who do not follow such advice.

- Students who follow advice for English courses are almost four times as likely to succeed than those who disregard such advice.

- Overall, women are more likely to follow advice, to achieve higher GPAs, and to persist longer than men.

- Women with more than one dependent, who work outside school and carry more than six credit hours, are more likely to succeed than any other subgroup in the study.

- Men taking fewer than six credit hours, who are single, and who have not followed advice are more likely to fail and drop out than any other sub-group in the study.

Powers commented, "We, hopefully, will have math and other English classes protected by 1990."

She added, "It is not denying students, but preparing them for success, instead of failure if not prepared."

We not only give you the money for college. We also give you the time.

If you think the best way to pay for college is to put it off for a few years and join the military, you're half right.

Because with the New GI Bill, you can join the Army National Guard and get a guaranteed minimum of $18,000 for college.

But best of all, you serve two days a month and two weeks a year. Which means you can go to school full-time. Right now. On us.

So the question you have to ask yourself is not, can you afford college.

The question is, can you afford to wait.

"If I had my druthers, I would be teaching less and writing more," Mike said.

He stressed the fact he does enjoy teaching and receives many rewards from it.

King's hobbies include gardening, biking and woodworking.

King received a bachelor's degree in English at the University of Wisconsin, and a master's degree in English and creative writing at Iowa State University.

Results are in on survey of arts/sciences grads

A survey of 1986-87 DMACC arts and sciences graduates shows some encouraging results for current DMACC students.

The survey, recently completed by Leonard Bengtson, manager of research, planning and reporting, Ankeny Campus, was sent to all 342 persons who completed the AA or AS degree in 1986-87.

A total of 165 students (48%) responded. Here are the results:

- While only about one out of four graduates of career option programs transferred to a senior institution, approximately two out of three graduates of college parallel programs transferred.

- Almost 60% of the graduates who transferred enrolled at ISU or Drake University.

- Almost two out of three graduates kept the same major at the transfer university. Individual responses indicate those who changed their majors were more likely to encounter difficulty in transfer of credits.

- Only two students withdrew during their first semester at the senior institution. Six others were still enrolled in their first semester at the time they completed the survey.

Overall, 94% of those who transferred were still enrolled in the transfer university at the time they completed the survey.

- DMACC graduates experienced relatively few problems in the transfer of credits with approximately four out of five indicating that all the credits they expected, or more, transferred.

- Approximately one in three graduates reported experiencing some degree of transfer shock, including a temporary lowering of grade point average after transfer.

- Over 80% of the graduates reported DMACC instructors were as helpful or more helpful than those of the transfer institutions.

- Among graduates who did not transfer, more than three-fourths reported they were employed full time, and another 15% were employed part time. Eighty percent of those employed were working in a field either directly or indirectly related to their DMACC major and 93% were employed in Iowa.
