Rotaract makes donation

by KAROL J. HICKS
Editor-In-Chief

The Rotaract Club, represented by its new officers, met at the Salvation Army Church a few days before Christmas break. The reason for this visit was to present a check for $117.00 and several boxes of food and clothing for the needy.

Lee McNair, advisor for the group, wishes to thank each and every one of you who were kind enough to share your good fortune with those less able to provide for themselves. The donations enabled several families, who otherwise would have had a pretty dismal Christmas, to enjoy a few good meals and keep warm.

The SAB (Student Action Board) worked with Rotaract to accumulate food this last holiday season. They (SAB) held a dance last fall and charged cans of food as admittance.

Record enrollment for spring semester

by DODI O'LENA
Staff Writer

As of Friday, Jan. 11, 1991, early estimates indicated a new record spring enrollment for DMACC-Boone Campus. The number of students enrolled, at that time, was 856.

Executive Dean, Kriss Philips, estimates approximately 925-950 students will be signed for spring semester. That would mean a 2%-4% gain over last year's enrollment of 909 students. The dean feels that this will be, "A good, healthy increase."

Official numbers will appear in the next issue.

Sunny Powers is selected 'Distinguished Teacher of the Year'

DMACC's most prestigious award for its faculty, the "Distinguished Teacher of the Year" Award, was given to Sunny Powers on President's Day at the Ankeny Campus, Jan. 7.

Sunny Powers has been the director of the Learning Center on the Boone Campus since the fall of 1975.

She took a "one-man" operation serving a small number of students to the present Learning Center which serves almost half the students on the Boone Campus during any one month.

As the room and staff expanded, so did the services of the Learning Center.

In the beginning, the primary thrust was for students to come and study for GED preparation, to get the high school equivalency diploma. That service is still included in the responsibilities of the Learning Center, but much more has been added.

Now students from 10-15 high schools come to take courses to transfer back to their schools, to get a DMACC diploma, or complete work for the GED.

College students take advantage of the many course offerings taught by Learning Center instructors; others come to learn word processing on the computer, to write an English assignment, to get help in a particular subject, or sometimes just to find a ready shoulder to cry on.

Over the years, Sunny has, as she says, "grown with the needs of the Center." When it was decided to put a high school level chemistry class in the Learning Center, Sunny took all the tapes, books, and tests home and spent a summer learning what the students would have to know for that class.

She has had many memorable experiences with different students over the years. One blind man needed to know how to do math problems on his abacus-style instrument given him by the Iowa Sight Saving School. Sunny found his text in print (his was in Braille) and learned how to do it so she could teach him. Eventually he asked for tapes of each lesson so he could practice at home.

Many international students found a friendly face and a helpful teacher in the Learning Center when they met Sunny. She still tries to make all the students feel welcome and tries to maintain a warm, caring atmosphere in the Learning Center.

In 1987, Sunny was asked to chair the Department of Communications/Humanities for the Boone Campus. She has had approximately 25 full- and part-time instructors under her supervision. She wrote a manual to assist part-timers in their orientation to the Boone Campus; all the current part-timers have had high praise for Sunny's style of supervision and her willingness to listen to their concerns.

Sunny was also co-chair of the "Ver" Team, which was responsible for the remodeling of the Boone Campus in 1986. She worked with the faculty to try and find solutions to the many problems facing the campus.

Where Sunny "shines," however, is with her dealings with students. She makes each individual aware of her concern with his/her problems and Sunny doesn't rest until she can find a solution for them.

Some of her students have commented, "She's the best teacher I ever remember having;" "I wish she were my teacher next semester, too; she made me actually ENJOY math!"

Faculty praise has also been high. One person said, "I know of no one on this campus that has more care and concern for the students' needs and tries everything in her power to meet those needs."

A $500 scholarship to go to a DMACC student will also be set up in Sunny's name.

Sunny Powers, standing second from right, received the "Distinguished Teacher of the Year" award over all DMACC campuses, in a presentation at Ankeny Campus, January 7. Sunny is director of the Boone Campus Learning Center, and teaches various composition and literature courses. Also shown in the photo, are: Sandi Krause, seated, Sally Tanner, Jinny Silberhorn, and Jan Larson, Learning Center personnel.

DODIMANIA

Making Decisions

by DODI O'LENA
Staff Writer

One of the hardest things I am faced with daily, is not only making a decision, but making one knowledgeably.

The Webster dictionary defines the word DECISIONS as - 1: the act or result of deciding especially by giving judgement 2: promptness and firmness in deciding; determination. And the word KNOWLEDGE as - 1: understanding gained by actual experience 2: range of information 3: clear perception of the truth 4: something learned and kept in the mind.

First, you must know what it is you are deciding on. Then you can define the problem, ask yourself specific questions, and try to answer them.

The second step is to recognize "all" of your options and/or alternatives. This may include any social pressures involved in influencing your personal choices. Whether a person agrees or disagrees with these social pressures, they are free to choose whether or not to act in accordance with them.

The third step is to consider the consequences of each alternative, instead of gravitating toward the one that initially seems most attractive. For example, make two columns for each alternative; one for the positives, and the other for the negatives. This may help the decision to become more apparent and aid you in your decision.

The fourth step is to clarify your own values. This involves cutting through the ambivalence in order to decide which of several options and/or alternatives you most strongly value. You must also respect your own feelings.

A person faced with making a knowledgeable decision may also choose to "sleep on it" or take some time to think about it in depth; then act on it.

Take your time when faced with a tough decision. Don't let yourself be rushed or pushed into making snap judgements. Be sure to think of all your options thoroughly. You're the one who has to live with the results in the end.

Comments by the Dean

by KRISS PHILIPS
Executive Dean

Welcome Back!!! I hope your holiday season was a happy and joyous one. I am certain you are all anxious to return to your Boone Campus responsibilities.

From my perspective, 1990 was a very good year for the Boone Campus. Thank you for causing this successful year to happen.

There is no doubt in my mind that our campus will continue to grow and prosper in 1991 as we continue to offer quality education and service to our students. We currently have over 856 students pre-registered for this spring and I anticipate the enrollment of 925-950 students by the beginning of spring term.

Prof finds a lot of sex on TV

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (CPS)—College students' viewing of X-rated videos has made them "less satisfied with their partners, physical appearance, sexual performance and sexual curiosity," a study released Nov. 9 by Michigan State University Prof. Bradley S. Greenberg found.

Unveiling the survey at a conference about the effects of the mass media on the family, Greenberg added that teenagers hear at least 1,400 references a year to sexual activities on the prime time TV series they tend to watch.

Viewing MTV an average of an hour a day, Greenberg found, "would add 1,500 more video sex experiences on an annual basis to the teenager's imagination."

Rotaract meeting is set

The first meeting of the Rotaract club is scheduled for Wednesday, January 23 at 1:30 p.m. in the library conference room. Anyone interested in joining the group is welcome to come and share with the planning of events for this spring term.
